NUMBER 29.

Hebron 5-Radcliffe 4.

Saturday afternoon the Hebron team defeated the Radcliffe team by the above score in a well-played, closely contested game. Both pitchers had excellent control of the ball, only one base on balls being given by either. Norway hit Gammon freely, but not as a rule safely, they secured 9 hits with a total of 10. Hebron got 8 singles from Cole. Norway got 2 runs in the first. In the fourth, Hebron made one on Norway's errors, added 1 in the sixth, one in the seventh, and 1 in the eighth. Hebron gave up their chance at the bat in the ninth, in order to shorten the game. In Norway's part, two runs were made, but the team was unable to tie the score or win.

HEARTS COURAGEOUS

Copyright, 1902, by The Bowen-Orrill Company

These told her how the Reprisal, lodging the British sloops of war, had landed Benjamin Franklin safely at Nantes, of his meeting there with Beaumarchais and of his reception in Paris at the little hotel in the Rue Vieille du Temple, where a mercantile sign of "Roderique-Hortalez & Co." hid a pleasant conspiracy whose object was the furnishing of war supplies to the American colonists, and whose silent partners were a prime minister and a king. Somewhere, she thought, there in his own land perhaps Armand was safe, not believing in her, but free and unconquered.

The sound of war came nearer when Howe's fleet sailed into the Chesapeake and when Henry, summoned in haste from Hanover, called out the militia. She watched them march through Williamsburg, sixty-four companies strong, but the fleet and the army it carried sailed on to beat back Washington at Brandywine, to enter Philadelphia and turn the grave town into an orgy of Tory rejoicing.

So the months passed in alternate hope and despair. Spring unfurled, summer dropped its blooms, autumn singed glebe and copse, snow fell and purified the earth stains. And at last Virginia knew that Burgoyne had been entrapped in the northern forests; that Philadelphia had been evacuated; that the cord which was to encircle the throat of the rebellion had snapped; that France had recognized independence and made a treaty of alliance with the United States.

There followed a closer campaign when Lord Germaine, the king's war minister, having failed to strangle the monster, attacked its extremities, when the redcoats swept into the southern harbors, when Savannah and Augusta fell, when Lincoln's army was caught at Charlestown and Gates routed at Camden, and these were the south's darkest days.

It knew there was no hope from the army in the north—meager, ill clothed, half starved, without magazines, arsenals or credit. Washington lay watching like a hawk Clinton's 10,000 men at New York, hoping for an effective force from France, waiting with the sublime patience which more than all else made him a great soldier.

Virginia bore her burdens uncomplainingly, giving of her substance to the struggle, while the slaves which Cornwallis sent scampering from burned lower plantations trailed through her borders, sowing insurrection among the faithful blacks.

"John the Baptist," demanded Anne sternly one day after Groom had reported that scarce fifty slaves remained in the quarters, "an the British come here, are you going to run away too?"

"Mis' Anne," he complained appealingly, "don't yo' know no 'spectable nigger gwine ter list'n ter dem shifless trash what yo' ransackin' 'erom' widout no homes? Deo ain' no 'count Yo' couldn' swap 'em off fo' shucks. Yo' knows I ain' nudder gwine leabe de plantation whar I was drug up. Dat Cornwallis! Huh! Dis nigger smell de brimstone whin's huttin' fo' him."

When the sky looked blackest came General Nathaniel Greene into the south, young, light hearted and eager. And what did he not accomplish? He welded anew the scattered remnants of Gates' army, fanned North Carolina Whiggery into a blaze, beat Tarleton, sent Cornwallis back, breathing hard, to the seacoast. It was the end of the second campaign.

"What will King George do now?" Anne asked Henry jubilantly.

His face was very grave as he answered: "There is only one thing left. 'Tis a stroke at the heart of the rebellion. And that heart is here in Virginia." He guessed truly.

There were hasty preparations for flight throughout the lower peninsula on that snow shod day when the traitor Arnold's fifty ships came to anchor off Jamestown island. The sky was a ceiling of translucent gray. The stubby cedars trailed sweeping tangles of crystallized berry, and every shrub was cased in argent armor. Fleet horsemen had ridden from Williamsburg in all directions rousing the frozen countryside.

At noon Anne took her place in the chariot beside Mrs. Tillotson, bound for North. Walker's of Castle Hill, far enough north to be beyond the reach of the invaders. Her aunt was to fare even farther, to Berkeley.

They waved brave goodbys through tears to the little group of house negroes whimpering on the porch. Raleigh was to go with the remaining servants to Brandon, Mammy Evaline was left in charge of the place, and John the Baptist, her son, was to care for the horses and run them off on approach of the British. The house linen and silver Anne had buried with her own hands, and the family portraits had been hidden under the stables.

It was a sad journey, but one performed that day by more than one household.

Colonel Tillotson rode a part of the way beside the coach. "Twil not be for long," he insisted cheerfully. "I have assurance from Mr. Henry that Washington will send troops before spring break. He thought it would be General Lafayette—the young French marquis who passed through Williamsburg, you remember. Would Washington himself could come!" he added fervently.

But his wife was not to be comforted. "Colonel," she cried brokenly, "I feel sure we shall never see Gladden Hall again."

More than once before spring came tiptoeing down the trees Anne looked out to the north from quiet Castle Hill, homestead for a sight of Greenway

Court and Baron Fairfax. Weakness and age had at last sent the old man to his chair, and he sat through the long days sorrowfully patient, as his ancestor, the hero of Naseby fight, sat at Denton in Yorkshire, waiting the coming of the victorious banners of the king.

The beginnings of the struggle had found him doggedly wrathful. "Bill of rights," aligh? he would shout. "I want no benefit of it. I am a colonial and loyal."

And when his neighbors contended that what they stood for was the old issue for which their ancestors broke pikes at Marston Moor he turned his back upon them.

In the Old Dominion there was comparative tranquillity, but even in the forest he had heard the first blare of the king's armies in Boston and New York with a hungering fear that drew his eyes often wistfully toward Mount Vernon. There sat the lad he had trained and molded, "the first soldier in Virginia," a grave man. They whispered evil things of this man's loyalty now, but the baron for long shut his ears and would not hear.

The time came soon when Tories were hated, despised, driven by fire from their homes, their property confiscated. But this old man alone was not touched.

"Let the rebels come!" he had roared, pounding the floor with his thorn stick. "Let them come! I met the Indians here in '55, and I leave for me cursed rebels. The king may not be able to protect, but he will reimburse me."

But Tories and Whigs passed by alike, and not a pound was touched in his storehouse, not a horse taken from his stables. When the foragers swept the valleys his field slaves slunk away with the rest, but he had not a house negro who did not stay with him to the end.

The final chapter was opened at last. Lafayette was marching southward with twelve hundred of Washington's own light infantry. The word had struck sharper than an adder's tooth—the bloody snows of Valley Forge, the pelting retreat through the Jerseys, want, rout, discouragement and despair! The king must win, and George Washington was gone too far even for love's forgiveness. Now he sent his rebels to his own natal colony to hurl them in a final desperate attack at the king's throat.

After this news the baron took to his couch and closed his doors against report. Through all the war Washington had found time to send gentle and tender letters to his old friend. These my lord had read, longing for some sign of sorrow or of turning, but they had brought none. Now he read no more.

One morning Anne stood at the deep set window of her room at Castle Hill. Far away, their dim splendor relieved by golden gorges of early sunlight, reared the solitary mountains, hung with pale green, pale gold and blent lavender and graylike faded tapestries. The June breeze was soft with the first thrill of summer, blowing across the shelving fields. Birds were flitting in the tulip trees, and the dewed odor of roses lay on the garden, drenchingly sweet. The place seemed safe folded from the war that lay, a sudden fiend in a cloud, far away across the Virginia hills.

A distant clatter came to her, and she looked and listened where the eastern road bent behind clusters of trees. Almost before she had guessed the meaning of the sound a troop of dragoons, whose red coats proclaimed them British, dashed into view and rode at top speed toward the house.

The British! So far to the westward! What could it mean? Then, in clutching apprehension, she fled downstairs to Mrs. Walker's room, to find that lady already dressing with speed and trepidation. As she opened the door, the yard below swarmed with a confusion of soldiers and shrieking servants.

"Stay where you are," came Dr. Walker's voice from the next room. "I am going."

"No, doctor," Mrs. Walker opposed. "I am going myself." And so she did, Anne with her.

Aunt Daph, the cook, having fled from the kitchen, was crouched, shuddering, at the foot of the stair. "Dem's de Britisheers, missus!" she moaned. "Dem's de Britisheers!"

"I know it," answered Mrs. Walker calmly as a knock thundered at the door. "Go back to your kitchen."

The figure on the threshold bowed till his plumes swept the sill.

"Pardon me, madam—adieu," he began, "but I must ask of your hospitality a breakfast for myself and my officers. I may introduce myself? Colonel Tarleton of the British legion, at your service."

Anne caught an astonished breath at realization that she was standing before the most dreaded of Cornwallis' cavalry leaders. Could this red cheeked, petulant lipped lad be the dragon of whose cruelty and daring she had so often heard? She courtesied slowly to his bow.

"I might add," announced the visitor, "that no harm shall be done this property. We have business farther on."

Farther on! Anne's mind leaped to the thought of Charlottesville, only six miles away. The Virginia assembly was in session there. And Henry! She must gain a little time.

"Let me see to the breakfast, Mrs. Walker," she volunteered. Aunt Daph's quite distracted.

Tarleton smiled, bowed again to her and clanked to the door. Then Anne caught Mrs. Walker's hand and whispered: "Tis a raid on the assembly. We must keep them here as long as possible. Tell the doctor?"

She had no time to speak further, for Tarleton re-entered with the others.

"I have been obliged to set a guard about the negro quarters and at the front and rear entrances of the house," he said. "We shall soon relieve you of this inconvenience. Ah, doctor, good morning!"

Anne betook herself to the kitchen and stirred Aunt Daph's to activity. While the great fire roared her brain was busy. She must get through that cordon of redcoats—must—must!

As the cook piled the irons with fragments of chicken, Anne's eyes, through the back door and window, took in the situation. Full a dozen troopers were grouped there, stretched lazily in the sun, their horses hobbled and cropping grass eagerly in a widening half circle. The quarters were on the farther side, out of sight from the kitchen. Seeing, she bade Aunt Daph lay more of the chicken on the racks and herself fed the fire till its heat scorched her cheeks.

"Clar' ter goodness, Mis' Anne, yo' got 'nuff dar fo' fo' ty, 'stid o' fo'!"

"Hush!" Anne commanded. "Go and lay one of the tables in the milk room."

The negress raised her hands. "Wid all dem sojers out dar? Honey, dee jes' split my haid wide open!"

"Do as I tell you," said Anne. "They won't hurt you. Make no noise, and come back quickly."

The old woman made her way gingerly past the groups across the yard.

"Mis' Anne," she said as she came back, all her teeth gleaming, "one ob dem Britisheers call to me jes' lak folks."

After this news the baron took to his couch and closed his doors against report. Through all the war Washington had found time to send gentle and tender letters to his old friend. These my lord had read, longing for some sign of sorrow or of turning, but they had brought none. Now he read no more.

China's Versatile Warriors.
Harold Bolce in the July Booklovers Magazine:—The Chinaman is the embodiment of the business spirit, and the established principles of traffic permeate even the soldier ranks. The secret of China's inglorious military career in recent years is that the rank and file had not been paid. The Chinaman's ruling passion for business displayed itself in the war with Japan. A general in the Japanese army told me that after the first fire from his regiment of infantry
the Chinese troops arrayed against him disappeared like a mist. Not long thereafter they reappeared in the rear of his army, retreating to his soldiers.
Nevertheless, he was confident, there was no lack of bravery among these thrifty deserters. Inquiry developed that they had not been paid their wages,
and that they lived in no expectation that their miserable cash allotment as heroes would ever come their way.
When they could coin an opportunity in to profit, the alternative—of ingloriously facing the firing line without pay—naturally failed to kindle material zeal.

Reformation of Miner's Gulch.

The habitants of Miner's Gulch
Took a most profitable
In their ready-made profanity.
"Twas long, and deep, and wide,
And they swore at all occasions.
They blasphemed (was no disgrace)
At every opportunity.
Excuse, or time, or place.
The person often chided them,
And even the doctor blushed;
While Judge Trotter, who heard them,
Looked sorrowful and crushed.
But in sinful pride and arrogance
They went their wicked ways,
Until one Sunday morning,
Chagrined, in sore amaze,
With hanging heads and looks of shame,
They joined in righteous plot,
If either of them swore again
To shoot him on the spot.
And what had worked the wondrous spell
In each sin-hardened heart?
Oh, listen friends! the miracle
I'm dying to impart.
There was a wicked out-law man,
Who used a deadly trade;
When they were absent-minded like,
He'd watch, and steal their dust,
And personal belongings, though
He never stopped to ask.
And oh, perhaps some didn't howl
When he punched a flank.
'Twas then their great profanity,
Artistic, and complete,
Fourscore in a single fact,
They reckoned none could beat.
And if that out-law man had ears
They surely must have heard
Judge Trotter's eyes were moist with tears
Over language that he spoke;
Till that out-law stole his thoroughbred
Kentucky horse, a roan!
Then the Judge used language, so 'twas said—
"I would blast a granite shaft,
For the Judge, he is a college man,
And swore by rule, exact.
Education aids in every
He proved it for a fact.
The boys had never heard the Judge
Converse that way before;
They heard him once exclaim "oh fudge,"
And thought he thought he swore—
But now disgraced, confounded
It gave them quite a shock.
They learned that their most lurid words
Were simply baby talk.
Compared to his forensic oaths
And choice well rounded words,
Their worst profanity became
As twitters of birds.
Therefore they hastened to reform—
"I'm simply selling
And when a man forgot and swore
They shot him in his train."

Enthusiasm the Watchword.

The sixteenth annual convention of Lewiston district Epworth League held Wednesday and Thursday of last week was one of the most enthusiastic, albeit earnest and spiritual conventions that the best town of Bethel has witnessed, and one which will long be remembered by the delegates and friends present. The League was entertained by the people of Bethel in the hearty, hospitable manner of which they are so capable, and every visitor was made perfectly at home. The church was beautifully decorated in the league colors,
red and white, both within and outside.
The exercises began promptly, with a devotional service led by Rev. C. A.
Brooks, of Norway, and the keynote of spirituality was thus promptly struck,
and about it all the convention was harmonized. Addresses of welcome were given by Miss M. A. Cummings, president of the local league, and Rev. F. C.
Potter, pastor of the church, to which president Rev. D. B. Holt made a suitable reply. The business session was then held, Rev. F. C. Potter acting as secretary. In the absence of Mr. Abbott, Committees were appointed. credentials, A. B. McAllister of Norway, Helen Baker and Ethel M. Morse, Bethel.
Resolutions, Grace L. Teague, Lewiston,
Annie Potter, Lewiston, Rev. A. K. Bryant, Newnamode, A. P. Morton, Lewiston, Rev. H. A. Clifford, South Paris,
Mrs. Daisy L. Castland, Lewiston.
In the afternoon the services began with a devotional meeting in charge of D. L. Joslin of Norway, who was succeeded by three speakers, giving each eight minute papers on the Junior League, and a model meeting in which successful methods were illustrated by the superintendents of the Bethel Juniors, Miss Mattie Kendall and Ethel Morse. The spiritual department was in charge of the chairman, D. L. Joslin, a paper on Systematic Bible Study, by Miss Cross, was read by Grace L.
Teague, of Lewiston. The morning
watch, by John Stewart, and the League and the Sunday school, by A. B. McAllister, were helpful papers. Besides his paper on tithing, Rev. E. W. Keniston of Norham read "Thanksgiving Ann, in an enjoyable manner. Helen Bisbee's paper, Christian Stewardship, and Mrs. F.
C. Potter's Effective Missionary Methods were excellent ones, and very helpful.
The evening service was conducted by Rev. C. A. Brooks. A very fine solo was sung by Jane Gibson, of Bethel, in addition, other fine music by the choir.
Dr. W. Berry gave a magnificent address on Personal Work, and followed it with a report of the general conference of 1904, taking the time of another speaker, H. A. Dunham, of Bath, who was absent. Though at some length, he was closely listened to the end.
A sunrise prayer meeting, held on the summit of Paradise Hill, opened the services of Thursday. At six o'clock the delegates gathered. One of the exercises was the discovery of the serpent, who like his ancestor sixty centuries ago, had invaded the precincts of Eden. The Bethel Eves were too wise, and promptly cast him out. The exercises were reading, "I Will Lift up Mine Eyes," a prayer, song, and testimony service led by Rev. H. A. Clifford.
At 8.30 Devotional service was conducted by Rev. D. F. Nelson. Business of reports was attended to. The nominating committee reported two lists of officers, the second one being accepted,
and the officers chosen were:
Pres.—Rev. V. C. Canham, Auburn.
1st Vice-pres.—H. D. Bryant, Lewiston.
2d Vice-pres.—Rev. F. C. Potter, Bethel.
3d Vice-pres.—Louise Fowler, Bethel.
4th Vice-pres.—Alice D. Weymouth, Lewiston.
Junior Supt.—Mrs. C. A. Brooks, Norway.
Sec.—D. C. Abbott, Lisbon.
Treas.—Ethel Morse, Bethel.
Press Reporter—Mrs. Daisy L. Castland.
The next papers were on Mercy and Help Work, in rural communities, by Mrs. F. C. Norcross, was read by the president, in cities, by Louise Fowler, Bethel, and the Deaconess home, by F. E.
Bent, Bethel. These showed how the E. L. may meet the needs in these times.
At this point adjournment was made to West Bethel, where meetings were held in the Birches. The universities were reported, Maine conference Epworth League anniversary, by Mrs. Car-land, State Epworth League, by Ex-sta-
ment, A. P. Norton, First District Biennial conference at Newport, R. I., by Mrs. Cartland.
Picnic dinner was then enjoyed.
The platform meeting opened with familiar songs, there were papers on the Epworth League constitution, or What to Do, by Rev. F. E. Potter. What the League has done for the church, by Rev.
H. A. Clifford, and Personal Evangelism,
Merrill House, Andover, by Rev. Felix Powell, of Long Island, which was a specially fine address. Two practical papers on Socialism, left over from morning, was read. The Epworth Herald's claims and uses were presented by V. H. Canham.

After the return to Bethel, the evening service "was held, with an address by Rev. D. B. Holt, of great value and excellence, on the work of the Holy Spirit, and a powerful consecration service was led by Rev. Felix Powell, which closed the convention.

The Farmer a Business Man.

"The American farmer of today is as different from the farmer of 20 years ago
as his son, who went to city business life at the same time, is different from the farmer now," writes a correspondent in a contemporary.
"There are reasons for the change and it is important that advertisers using the agricultural press, should clearly recognize and understand them.
"Perhaps the first and most potent reason is his prosperity. He has had what business men would call some good years. He has been paying off old mortgages and has money left for improvements.
"Agricultural and other colleges have sent educated young men back to the farm to introduce new methods, to the education of the elders. In other words, the standard of intelligence of the farmer
has been raised higher, proportionately,
than probably any other calling.
"The farmer sees more of the city and the city man more of the farmer than formerly. Each learns something of his good, each imbibes something of the characteristics of the other. At the county fairs the biggest pumpkin gives way to the best pumpkin; the general
utility hog to the bacon hog or the land hog. Good roads have induced him to ride in better carriages and drive better horses. His county institute and farmers' club have done as much for his crops and pocketbook as his fertilizers.
He has been imbued with his children's desire for knowledge and the rural mail deliveries have given him the opportunities of getting it, of getting the news
that interests him before it is worn out, and in time to use what is useful. He has become a business man. His farm papers are his professional literature and he has them to cover all phases of farming; whether a specialist in dairying, poultry, stock or general farming, there
are able papers edited for his specialty.
The farmers' wives and his daughters,
even more progressive, are readers and educators.
"Farmers' telephone exchanges are becoming well established and thousands of farmers never leave home nowadays with a load of produce without having first inquired by 'phone the selling price.
They sell for cash (the days of barter are gone) and as they sell they buy.

Underground Water for Public Supply.

Driven wells as the source of a public water supply are recommended by the Massachusetts Board of Health in every case where such a system is practicable.
The purity of underground water and its safety from pollution are recognized as facts of the utmost importance, and therefore any town of city seeking a new water supply is urged to determine the possibility of using driven wells before considering any other source. The low cost of establishing a driven well plant
is also an element in favor of such a system.
Brunswick is the first town in Maine
to take advantage of this modern method, and its success in securing an abundant supply of pure water is a matter of interest throughout the State. The system is now being constructed in Brunswick by B. F. Smith & Bro. of Boston, who successfully located the supply in that town, and who installed at Lowell, Mass., the largest driven well system in the country, which yields eight million gallons daily.

An Important Fact.

The Report recently issued by the Connecticut Agricultural Station, under the Pure Food Law, shows that 33 percent. of the samples of cream of tartar purchased from grocery stores during the past year were adulterated with quantities of plaster, lime or alum.
Housekeepers may avoid the danger of this species of adulteration and be able to make the best things more easily and economically at home by buying good baking powder. Years ago the Royal Baking Powder Company established its own cream of tartar refinery to make cream of tartar 100 per cent. pure, which it uses exclusively in Royal baking powder. This is an important fact for every housekeeper to know.

yield the same result when Washburn-Crosby Co.'s
Gold Medal Flour is used—always satisfying, nutritious bread; light, rich cakes; uniformly delicate pastry.
Bakers know its value from daily experience—from the time the flour goes into the bin until it is handed out a finished food to the smiling customer.

Washburn-Crosby's Gold Medal Flour

is the favorite of housewives, because it is easily worked, yields a superior quality of baking, and a greater quantity
than any other. Gold Medal flour is made of the finest spring
wheat, so milled that the gluten
and germ of the grain are retained, giving the bread
a fruitlike or almond flavor unknown to improperly milled flour.

Children's Day Concert.

The Children's day concert last Sunday evening was a very pretty and enjoyable occasion. The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens, daisies and ferns. The motto, "God bless the children," on the wall, back of the pulpit was prettily decorated and was a nice and fitting design. The program was appropriate and well carried out. Mrs. J. B. Howard conducted the recitations and Jennie Hamlin the music, while Rev. Mr. Howard was general superintendent. There was an act by several little girls entitled, "The golden band, and the little wanderer, also recitations. Solos were sung by Winnie Kendall, Lillian Kimball and the sweet story, Marion Noble sang of baby in dreamland. The songs by the Sunday school children were fine and coming and Children's day in Galilee, with other music by the choir.

There was a large gathering and the event was much enjoyed and profitable. Frequent showers. School at the village closed Friday. Alice Hamlin, who yet remains ill from the effects of fever, is reported as doing well.

John Sanderson of Dartmouth college made a short visit with his sister, Mrs. Blanche Merrill, recently. A small bird has made its appearance that eats the green peas from the vines, picking the pods clear off the peas.

Ethel Monroe is home on a vacation. She expects soon to return to Cumberland Center where she has engaged to teach another term of school.

We neglected to mention that on July 4, a game of ball was played between the married and single men. The married men beat of course. Score 10 to 1.

Grange Social.
The Grange held a social at the hall at Center Conway on the evening of the 14th. Admission, 10 cents; ice cream and cake, 10 cents; and they had mystery bundles to sell, 10 cents a package. They realized quite a little sum. They use the money to help pay for the use of their hall. Quite a number of summer people attended. Mrs. Walter Brown and cousin of Lynn played the piano for them, and Mr. Young and Miss Young of Lynn played on the banjo and violin. Miss Young is a teacher of violin music.

Mrs. O. M. Eastman and Mrs. Charlie Barrows and son Philip called on Mrs. Q. Stevens, Thursday. Mrs. Eastman's health is improving.

Fryeburg.

Cannon Dedicated at Fryeburg.
Grover Post, Tuesday, had a dedication service of two large cannons and the Woman's Relief Corps observed its second anniversary, having as guests Bosworth's Relief Corps of Portland. It was planned to have the exercises out of doors but owing to a shower they were held in New Church Hall. Dr. Seth C. Gordon gave the address of dedication touching the meaning of these bull-dogs of war, now turned to monuments of peace and hoped for the day when war should be no more.

Trin. E. L. Adams of the academy paid a tribute to the soldiers of Fryeburg and also the women who kept the homes while the men were gone. Mrs. Sawyer of Bosworth Corps congratulated the local corps on their work. John L. Eastman spoke a few words for Grover Post. The closing address was by John S. Barrows of Boston, a son of Fryeburg.

WILSON'S MILLS.

The Glorious Fourth.
Wilson's Mills being a very ambitious place of its size, celebrated the 4th with all the noise it was capable of making. The ringing of the church bell at midnight ushered in the usual pandemonium of red-rock and small arms.

The antiques and horrors duly paraded our one street headed by uncle Sam in costume suited to the occasion while uncle Solon and his sister brought up the rear.

A dance board, refreshments, etc., were furnished by the Aztecos Grange. The Granite band of Berlin, 34 pieces, furnished the music.

DENMARK.

Fourth of July Circle.
The 4th passed very quietly. The Congregational circle met with Clara Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Pingree at the Davis homestead, where the church was organized 75 years ago. About 150 were present and after a fine and bounteous supper, toast master Rev. Geo. Woodard performed his part in own quaint, fine style. Toasts given by visiting clergymen and many young people of the town were highly appreciated by those present.

Tuesday, services were held at the church where many of the former pastors were present and took part in the services.

Crops of all kinds are looking finely, only a little behind time.

Farmers commenced haying July 11, and grass is more than average.

Winifred C. Smith, who graduated from the normal school in Lowell, Mass., June 22, is at home for a summer vacation.

N. A. Robinson and family of Worcester came July 6th to their cottage Fair View. Mr. Robinson brought a team for use while he intends to get all the enjoyment possible from his summer vacation.

Mrs. Caleb Morrill returned from her visit at East Bowdoinham and Gardner last week.

Rev. F. A. Davis held services at the Methodist church last Sunday. There will be another meeting next Friday evening.

July 4 at Webb's Mills was observed by the dedication of the new Free Baptist church. A fine bell was hung in the belfry in the morning. A dinner was served in the building. At 2 o'clock an open air service was held with prayer by Rev. J. A. Libby, remarks by Jonas Edwards of Auburn, songs and recitations by children and an address by Rev. D. Lewis Malvern of Portland. In the evening after supper an address was given by Hon. B. M. Fernald of Poland. Rev. S. C. Whitcomb and Dr. Malvern made a few remarks. The day's exercises wound up in a blaze of glory with fireworks on the pond.

The boys who are learning to hustle for themselves are immeasurably superior to those who are pampered and humored and carefully guarded and favored in the struggle for existence.

The son of rich parents is heavily handicapped if he is made to feel that his folks have money, and that he has expectations. There isn't the same pressure to do his best holding over such a lad that there is over the son of poorer parents. He doesn't feel that he has to apply himself in school. He doesn't try to scheme, plan, and contrive and deny himself to get anything that he wants.

Mrs. Fred Gurney took carbolic acid by accident, Sunday night, her home in Hebron and died in a short time. She was unwell in the night and about midnight, reached for a bottle of Brown's Instant Relief. There were three bottles of similar size and shape, and she got the wrong one, taking a teaspoonful of carbolic acid. She immediately started for South Paris for a physician, but he arrived too late, as she died within half hour or so. She leaves six children, the oldest twelve years of age. Funeral services were Tuesday.

The unquestioned high standing of Profitable Advertising, of Boston, makes its advertisement, printed in another column, worthy of special consideration. Any young man or woman who is anxious to earn a larger salary cannot do better than to be proficient in the preparation of business letters and should write to Profitable Advertising, 140 Boylston Street, Boston, for full particulars of its offer.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Ordinary sticking plaster makes a good remedy for corns, as it keeps them soft and prevents the rubbing. A little pinch of powdered sulphur put in a straw or glass tube and blown into the throat is a great help in cases of croup.

After making a linseed poultice spread it on muslin and smear it over with a knife dipped in boiling water, to prevent its sticking to the skin.

Salt water used as a gargle and mouth wash will strengthen the throat and harden the gums. It is also an excellent tonic for the hair as well as weak eyes.

It is a good thing to know that if one suffers from tender gums and sensitive teeth a teaspoonful of cooking soda in hot water will bring instant relief. This is excellent for a toothache too.

For an ordinary sore throat the outside of the throat may be rubbed at night with wet salt and the neck then bound with a narrow strip of flannel. Rubbing with camphorated oil is often beneficial in incipient sore throats.

A Yellow Dining Room.

Yellow is such a pretty color for a dining room. I saw a perfectly dear dining room in a perfectly dear cottage the other day that might be emulated delightfully. The papering was yellow, with a little sprig flower in it, and very simple yellow silkline curtains hung in straight folds at the windows.

In the four corners of the room were built little sets of shelves made of ordinary yellow pine wood placed diagonally, which held the fancy china. Several splashy primrose water colors decked the walls, and a yellow Japanese matting, covered with a yellow crumpled cloth, was on the floor. Some tall yellow vases and squat jugs were the only bric-a-brac in the room. A pot of cherry narcissuses and another of chrysanthemums was placed in the window. The simplicity and lack of trash, the joyous scheme of color, were a positive boon to the senses.

One is so apt to overcrowd the dining room, which should give the impression of freshness, daintiness and simplicity. —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

For the woman who likes to do a little pressing at home there is a single gas stove the size and shape of the iron upon which it fits.

Profitless Advertising.

What a lot of money is spent annually in profitless advertising! More cash is sunk in circulars, in dead wall displays and in programmes than would be required to fill the pages of the newspapers with profitable announcements every day in the year, and yet business men keep right on wasting their money in these mediums.

It is easy enough for merchants to prove the relative value of these different forms of publicity as compared with straight newspaper advertising.

Did you personally ever go and buy anything to which your attention had been called by a circular? Few people whom we have ever met, and we have met a great many, have admitted that they have. On the other hand, if you are honest you will acknowledge that you have made many purchases of articles advertised in the columns of the magazines and daily newspapers.—Editor and Publisher.

A Sensible Conclusion.

Two hundred prominent merchants of Reading, Pa., have declared that advertising in the newspapers is good enough for them and that henceforth they will use only the newspapers for such advertisements as they may publish. They will have nothing to do hereafter with schemes for ads. in hotel registers, desks, billboards, clocks, keyboards, charts, programmes, tickets, cookbooks, moving pictures, enunciators, curtain advertisements, oil paintings and pamphlets. Merchants and business men everywhere are reaching this sensible conclusion.

Proof of Satisfactory Results.

A company which now advertises its whisky in every first class newspaper began in a small way ten years ago. The head of the concern says he made the experiment of using five inches of space in a leading newspaper, offering a sample to any physician who would write for it. Although the small ad. was not conspicuous, it brought more than 300 letters. Every year since then the company has increased its newspaper advertising, which is proof that the results have been satisfactory.—Philadelphia Record.

A Page Every Day.

A Chicago department store has just closed a contract for a page advertisement a day for an entire year. The amount of money involved is about $120,000. The contract is one of the largest ever placed in this country. John Wanamaker of New York and Philadelphia was the first merchant to take a page of space for a year. At the present time he has half a dozen such pages running in different New York and Philadelphia papers.

Can Never Do Without It.

There never was a bigger mistake made by any merchant than for him to think that he had reached a point where he could do without advertising. He may not realize it, but when he stops the more enterprising merchant is gradually taking his business away from him.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Metropolis.

S. H. Burnham's Big Bank.
The June statement of the First National bank of Lincoln, Neb., shows the loan to be over $2,000,000.00 and deposits $2,386,774.89. The surplus and profits $124,704.24.

Those in this vicinity who sold their holding in this bank a few years since at 150 probably now wish they had held on to it.

A well informed person has the following to say in regard to Lincoln and its banks:—

No one can place an estimate on the success and prospects of the city of Lincoln in the future. Lincoln is naturally great from her location and the great forces that are pushing her forward. With their great railroad, commercial and educational center that is, it should go ahead and locate and encourage new manufacturers; she may catch up and and even go ahead of Omaha.

The field is open for Lincoln to become one of the great cities of the United States, the men are there to make it; the banks and bank capital are there.

The First National, under the control of Pres. S. H. Burnham, is making great headway under his management. He is a very competent and natural banker, solid in every way, good judgement, fair and honorable, and always willing to entertain good business propositions and meet the business public fairly; and all the other banks there are doing good business and are solid and sound. Mr. Burnham is pre-eminent a man among men, and one of the people.

Agreeable to the call of the county committee, Democratic delegates gathered at the Court House to select candidates for the several county offices. A few minutes before eleven, chairman B. G. McIntire called the meeting to order and read the call. He announced as temporary organization, chairman A. S. Kimball of Norway, secretary O. A. Thayer of Paris.

On taking the chair, Mr. Kimball spoke of the honor he felt at being called upon to preside over the convention. It is not desirable that all think alike, but every man should be able to give a reason for the political hope within him. He gave his reasons for adherence to the Democracy, the party of the common people, of adherence to the Democracy, the party of the common people, of individual equality against classes, and liberty against centralization, and cited instances of usurping of power by both State and national government.

It was voted that the county committee act as a committee on credentials, and their report gave representatives to the different towns as follows:

G. A. Brooks, A. E. Shurtleff, J. O. Alden, Thurston, F. H. Bartlett, C. F. Olden and W. H. Kilgore, and a similar committee to select a county committee.

Prof. L. C. Bateman of Lewiston was called on for an address, and responded with a vigorous attack on Republican lawlessness. Citing Colorado, he claimed the miners are standing for an 8-hour law, passed by a legislature, declared unconstitutional, this followed by a constitutional amendment making such a law mandatory, but the law has not been repealed. He made an arraignment on the Republican machine of Maine and lawless acts of the State government.

He said one-third of the Republicans in Maine would vote Democratic this fall if the Democrats would adopt live issues. He took a strong stand against the fish and game laws, reading the resolutions of the State Grange against the law, and commission.

He called attention to the invasion of America by immigrants from Southern Europe, and claimed they were brought here by the trusts to supplant the working man. In the field of temperance and prohibition he spoke of the humorous vein, and in conclusion advocated the Democracy in state and nation as the party of human liberty and constitutional law.

Frank A. Morey, of Lewiston, the advertised speaker, addressed the convention. He paid a tribute to Prof. Bateman's courage and independence in his decided stand, then spoke on national issues, the trusts who had increased greatly the burdens and cost of living with no corresponding raising of income. Especially he denounced as arbitrary and a breach of good faith Pres. Roosevelt's Panama canal and of the situation in the Philippines said there is an unconstitutional, arbitrary military government. He claimed the President a dangerous man, and law breaker, and saw a danger to the country of a military despotism and monarchy. He finished with a prophetic of Democratic success in the national election in November. On the conclusion of Mr. Morey's address a recess was declared to enable the committee to prepare their reports. The resolutions adopted, declare faith in the principle of equality of men before the law, demanded revision of game laws so as to thoroughly protect the farmer, and pledged aid at the polls to the candidates nominated at this convention. The other planks were a pledge of economy in state affairs and the careful and impartial enforcement of all the laws of the state. The committee on county committee presented the name of H. O. Blake of Oxford as a committee man to complete to Jan. 1, the service of the late W. N. Thomas of the same town. This was so voted.

The committee for 1905-1906 of two from each representative district was then read, and adopted. The list heads this report. The new county committee was authorized to fill vacancies that might arise.

Proceeding to nomination for office the speeches were brief in all instances and were as above. W. L. Farrar was named for treasurer, and according to named Geo. F. Eastman in his stead. For commissioner F. B. Howe was named, but declined, and G. W. Richardson was chosen. For sheriff the name of Bertrand G. McIntire was greeted with applause, his candidacy was advocated by several delegates. In accordance with nomination Mr. McIntire expressed his thanks, and pleaded for active and aggressive work. Democrats are as sincere, honest and able as any, and are worthy of every effort, legitimate and honorable, to attain victory.

The committee was authorized to fill any vacancy occurring. A vote of thanks was passed Messrs. Bateman and Morey and the convention adjourned.

BUCKFIELD.

The Smile that Won't Come Off.

"I am tired and weary too." Wife and I have picked rising two hundred quarts of berries. It is bad for old kidneys, but there is money in it. Yes, most one ear to go to your head to the season. Then the robins come and dispute your claim, then along comes some farmer and cuts the price. Not a bit, "two for a quarter" that will turn my neighbors in. Quick sales this year. There are other compensations that even old men are not oblivious to the smiles of the women folk. Now can't you pick me a couple of boxes? I wish you would. That smile supplemented by "two for a quarter" sends us afield even in the heat of the noonday sun, aware of course the smile was all for the fruit, still it carries us back to earlier and palmer days. I long since learned that a woman's smile is more efficacious than prayer. Adam learned that and so it has been all the way along. To raise church funds woman has been at the fore or to build a grange hall they will make the men's wallets squeal. That smile, come now, won't you?"
